UPDATE

TV GUIDE ★
PICTORIAL

The fate of Ypsilanti High's basketball team rests largely upon the shoulders of its three senior forwards, Robin Raymond (with the ball), Captain Bob Rhodin (24) and Joe Frye. After going through last season undefeated only to lose to Grand Rapids Ottawa Hills in the high school Class A state finals, the Braves begin this week another, hopefully more successful, shot at the championship.

PGA names Dey

DALLAS, Tex. (AP) — The naming of Joe Dey as commissioner of the $6 million pro golf tour figures to put the game in the best position possible, says Joe Ed Black, once a successful supervisor of the PGA tour.

Dey, who ruled the United States Golf Association as executive director since 1934, was signed to a five-year contract as head of the tournament players of the Professional Golfers Association.

"I admire Joe Dey very much," says Black. "I don't believe anybody could do the job better because I know he'll do what's right for the game and will rule firmly. The golfers have wanted a commissioner for years."

Black was tournament supervisor for 3½ years after a similar term as assistant supervisor. In fact, if the PGA and the American Professional Golfers, the group formed by the touring pros, had not agreed to settle their dispute late last December, Black was going to head the PGA tour in competition with the APG tour.

Black, who continues to rank high in the counsels of the PGA, knows intimately all the things involved in the squabble that saw the big names of the game pulling out to form their own tour.

The veto power of the PGA was one of the reasons for the split. It came the first time the PGA exercised it, overruling the players when they sought to schedule a new tournament in competition with another well-established tournament.

Under the new setup there will be a board of control. This board will set the policies of the PGA. Dey will carry the.

However, says Black, the PGA will retain its veto power although there appears little possibility it would have to use it under the new setup.

Drama springs from grassroots; Regional theater is newest source

By HELEN B. SHAFFER
Editorial Research Reports

Hope for the future of live theater in America may rest not with Broadway or even with off-Broadway, but with some 50 to 60 resident companies located across the country in cities and towns far from the Great White Way. These few dozen professional theaters — most of them founded within the past decade — constitute the heart of a burgeoning regional theater movement. Their influence is greater than their number might indicate.

These theaters set the pace for a grass-roots theater movement that extends to tens of thousands of local amateur groups. Among them are an estimated 4,000 so-called "community theater" organizations which are serious enough about their productions to seek the service of full-time, trained producers or directors. The resident professional companies are also active in theater education, either establishing their own training program or cooperating with the rapidly expanding drama departments of the nation's colleges and universities.

The result is a proliferation of live theater production — from Aeschylus to Albee — all over the country. The potentiality for enlarging the total audience for live theater among the American people is obvious. In some places, regional theaters play to audiences whose only other theatrical fare is on film or on the television screen. And because regional theater directors tend to be more adventurous than the typical Broadway producer, their audiences are being exposed to a particularly lively brand of the theater arts.

Regional theater is not new. It is a direct descendant of the little theater movement that began just before World War I and flourished during the 1920s. Several of the earliest little theaters—the Cleveland Play House, founded 53 years ago, for example—are still in existence, much changed from their humble, amateur beginnings.

The depression was a mortal blow to theater of all kinds. But the little theater movement had a brief revival, 1935-39, in the guise of the Federal Theater Project, which the government financed primarily to give jobs to unemployed actors.

After World War II, the movement re-emerged for the purpose of establishing good, professional-level theater companies in communities distant from Broadway and especially from the Broadway influence. The movement gained impetus in the late 1950s when major foundations began to put money into the ventures. Ford Foundation, a leading donor, distributed $11 million among resident theaters within a decade. In addition, around $2 million of federal money has reached the theaters via the National Foundation on the Arts and Humanities, established under a 1965 act of Congress.

Like its little theater ancestors of a half-century ago, the resident theaters stand in opposition to the "show biz" concept. They may be professional, but unlike the Broadway theater they are not commercial. Nearly all of the regionals are incorporated as non-profit organizations. Their commitment is to theater as an art, but as an art which has a vital connection with the people.

Despite the largesse from the foundations, money problems are chronic. "In the performing arts," authors of a Twentieth Century Fund study observed, "crisis is apparently a way of life. One hears constantly of disappointing seasons, of disastrous rises in cost, of emergency fund drives and desperate pleas to foundations for assistance."

Theater leaders realize that foundation grants will not be permanent and that the gap between box-office returns and costs must be met by local community support. This raises the question of whether the artistic and innovative type of production favored by regional theaters will attract the broad base of public support necessary for the theaters' survival.

Studies indicate that regional theatergoers tend to come from one class: high-salaried professional people mainly. Zelda Fichandler, founder of Washington, D.C.'s Arena Stage, has said: "If we wish to attract 'the new working class' we must attract them with the directness of our work, its abrasion, its physical energy, its source within life."

That the regional theaters may be performing this function is seen in the extent to which Broadway is welcoming shows that originated in the hinterland. Among recent productions that have gone on to New York are: "Red, White and Maddox," a musical that originated at the Theatre Atlanta; "The Great White Hope," a play that premiered at Washington's Arena Stage; "Fire," a drama first performed at Brandeis University Theater; and "Big Time Buck White," an off-Broadway success that originated in the Watts Writers' Workshop in Los Angeles. Regional theater clearly is serving as a testing ground for the commercial potentialities of new — and exciting — types of theatrical material.

The nose knows, but it's pretty hard to tell which is the real Jimmy Durante when the entire cast of "The Mothers-in-Law" welcomes their special guest by donning Durante disguises, Sunday at 8:30 p.m. on channel 4.

Young film-makers Proffer 'Greetings'

When a film like 'Greetings' made in a few weeks on a $40,000 budget promises to speak to the 'now' generation in a slashing commentary on the war, sex and the Kennedy assassination, anyone beyond the ranks of high school hippydom has the right to be skeptical. Never were the hostile so quickly won over.

Of course, an audience must be receptive to the film's central anti-establishment premise — satire cannot work if the object of criticism is left in doubt — but with that crisis past, director Brian De Palma's sure touch steers the film neatly between the dual dangers of the didactic and the purely sensational.

The movie is about three young men awaiting the inevitable "Greetings" from their friendly draft board.
Staged episodically, the story line is thin; but then the main characters are living for the moment, simply passing time until the arbitrary cut-off point.

Nevertheless, they are concerned — obsessively concerned, in fact — about those things which the older generation seems to take too lightly, i.e. the war, sex and the Kennedy assassination.

Trite and well-rehashed subjects all, "Greetings" in-fuses them with new punch by seemingly holding up for amusement the antic over-compensation of the anti-establishment. In riotously funny black comic scenes, the young heroes are shown indulging in lurid sexual fantasies, posing as "fags" and fascists to avoid the draft and, in an unforgettable study, tracing the trajectory of the assassination bullets on the nude body of an amorous Bronx secretary.

Brilliant spoof! But there are mixed afterthoughts when one boy ends up as the exhausted star of a stag movie, another as a private in Vietnam being followed through the jungle by a sportscoated news announcer, and the third is shot by a lone sniper who may or may not be an independent maniac.

The film was given an "X" (adults only) rating because of the several nude scenes.
These are, however, as inof-fensive as they are funny.
What may — and most likely will — offend many audiences is the movie's complete irreverence for such sacred subjects as the Presidency, the Warren Commission and the war of 'commitment.'

"Greetings" is in many ways similar to "The Graduate, consciously derivative in its opening sequence and the blithe innocence of its heroes. It is very different, however, in that it can not be taken all for fun as could its popularly appealing predecessor. The ease with which the businessman laughed at the paternal proselytizer of "plastics" will not be available to the sincere defender of the war establishment who sits in on "Greetings."

In many other ways, the film lacks solid box office appeal. It is technically far short of Hollywood standards, the actors are all unknowns and the attempt to recreate real-life scenes and dialogue occasionally slows the pace.

Nevertheless, a select audience — and hopefully not all "under 30's" — will applaud a film which speaks powerfully for a cause which has largely forfeited the art in articulation.

Opening March 6 at the Fifth Forum Theater in Ann Arbor, the film merits serious consideration.

'Sunken Treasure' lures the divers from the Calypso in Tuesday night's adventure in "The Undersea World of Jacques Cousteau," 7:30 on channel 7.

Open mouth; insert foot

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP) — Since we live in an age of anxiety, staying out of trouble is one of our major goals.

This isn't easy.

All a man has to do is open his mouth and say the wrong thing at the wrong time and he winds up with a face full of knuckles, or worse. Only the wary warrior survives in a woeful world.

Here, for example, are a few invitations that generally lead to disaster:

"Why pay the retail price for it? If you want me to, I'll arrange to get it for you wholesale."

"How can anybody who is grown up get lost in a few acres of woods? This looks like the road we came in on. Shall we try it?"

"Here, let me hold the match. You bend down and look in the tank."

"Go ahead, kid. Hit me in the stomach with all your might. I can take it."

"I don't want to mess up the bar with you, but how would you like to join me in the alley outside, where there's a little more swinging room?"

"Yes, our little Melvin has become quite proficient at imitating bird calls. Would you care to hear him do a few?"

"Heck, anybody can leapfrog over a fire hydrant. If I go first, will you follow me?"

"Just sign on the dotted line. In case you, don't find this secondhand car up to snuff in every way, all you have to do is drive it right back here to the lot, and we'll give you another one as good as new—and no ifs, ands or buts about it."

"I need a volunteer from the audience. How about you, young man? Will you please step up on the stage?"

"After all, we've been married 20 years. Can you give me one sensible reason why I should light your cigarettes for you?"

"If you think I'm bluffing, you can always double the bet."

"Why quit now when the party is just getting going good? Shall I pour you a single or a double?"

"Let's play charades."

"Put your money where your mouth is."

Ingrid hits Hollywood After 20-year break

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer
HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Her beauty undiminished at 53, Ingrid Bergman is here for her first Hollywood movie in 20 years.
"The last picture was 'Joan of Arc,'" she recalls, "And that was a pleasant memory. When I first came to Hollywood 10 years before that, I wanted to play Joan. It had been my girlhood ambition, and I kept trying to persuade David O. Selznick to let me do it.
"Finally I had to go to Broadway to play 'Joan of Lorraine,' and then I came back and did the picture. I understand it was not a success in this country, but it was liked in Europe, in France, especially. Many times when I am traveling about the country, the French will say, 'Ah, here is our Joan!'"

The two-time Academy Award winner ("Gaslight," in 1944; "Anastasia," 1956) has returned to Columbia Pictures, where she made "Adam Had Four Sons" 29 years ago. This time her vehicle is a comedy, "The Cactus Flower."

Although she has not done a film in Hollywood for two decades, Miss Bergman appeared at the Music Center last year in the Eugene O'Neill play, "More Stately Mansions."

The physical aspects of the town have changed immensely, she commented. But the studios remain the same.

"That's one thing that never seems to change," she said. "You go into a television studio and see the most modern equipment. But in the movie studios they still use the same ponderous cameras, the big lights. They are making films the same way they did 40 years ago."

'I'd give you a quarter, but ...'

NEW YORK (AP) — Remarks a street panhandler gets tired of hearing:

"I'd give you a quarter, but the smallest I've got on me is a $20 bill. I don't suppose you have change?"

"It's not a bad way to make a living. After all, you get plenty of fresh air and exercise."

"Why don't you get a job and earn a decent living like everybody else? Don't you have any self-respect?"

"I'll bet you own our own retirement home in Florida."

"Listen, Mac, the fuzz are wise to all the guys I got peddling dope for me now in this neighborhood. Until the heat's off, how would you like to do a little distributing for me? Wouldn't you like to make a little honest money for a change?"

"How's business, J. P. ? Considering the fact you don't have to keep up an inventory and don't have any overhead or labor to pay, you must turn about a 99 per cent profit. How did you get in this line anyway—just lucky?"

"Oh, don't give any money to this one, Jane. Give it to the beggar who hangs out at the next corner. He puts on a better act."

"If I give you 15 cents, will you promise not to waste it by spending it all on some woman?"

"I'll bet you have secret savings accounts in 12 banks."

"He looks like one of those hippies who went to seed but never came to flower."

"I'm trying to send two kids through college. Maybe I ought to learn your racket and work it on weekends."

"I'll bet the reason you look red-eyed is that you have to stay up all night to count the money you take in all day."

"Do you accept Canadian quarters?"

"My goodness, all I have is pennies. One ... two ... three ... four."

"I'd give you two bits, but I'm afraid you'll throw it away on food instead of good clean nourishing booze."

"I'm a novelist and looking for a plot. If I fork over a buck, will you sit on this park bench the rest of the afternoon and tell me the story of your life? If it makes me cry, I'll give you two bucks."

"I'll bet when you finish for the day your wife will meet you in a limousine and drive you home to a champagne supper."

Authoress overcomes The problem of 'plab'

By JOY STILLEY
 Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — "Take away the sense of adventure from man and you have 'plab,'" says Helen MacInnes, author of the current best-seller, "The Salzburg Connection," and 13 earlier novels that are crammed with adventure, intrigue and suspense.

Not only in books, but in life too, adventure and some aspects of violence are normal and necessary, believes the petite black-haired woman who talks with the same vivid details as in her writing style.

"If we try to take away the gruesome things in life and keep our children in cotton wool we do them in a disservice," she says. "I've noted that people who grew up in quite normal stages, going from cops and robbers to racing cars and scuba diving, are much more normal in later life. They're less likely to be under a psychiatrist's treatment than people who are given only toys that have no connection with violence."

Her latest book took shape from a newspaper account she read about diving operations in a Czechoslovakian lake to recover boxes sunk by the Nazis in their retreat.

"I filed it away in the back of my mind because I was finishing 'The Double Image' at the time," she says. "Later I found the same sort of activity had taken place in Austria, which I think is the most physically beautiful country in the world. I visited it again to get the geography and atmosphere of Austrian villages in mind."

But while admittedly pleased by her success as a writer, her greatest pride obviously lies in the fact that she is the wife of Gilbert Highet, eminent Greek scholar, professor of Latin at Columbia University, critic and author. They have a son, Keith, a New York lawyer.

Her conversation is liberally punctuated with references to "Gilbert." She is, in fact, so intent on recounting his honors and abilities that it is difficult to switch the talk back to her own achievements.

She prefers to write in pencil, although her last two books were typed because of writer's cramp, and she imposes no special work regimen on herself.

"I suppose I should take certain hours," she admits, "but I just get every damn minute I can at it." She revises as many as 12 times and her husband never gets a glance at the manuscript until it is ready for the typist.

"When I'm getting towards the end of a novel and all the problems are going to have to be resolved I feel like a man coming down a steep hill on a bicycle juggling three oranges," she laughs.

 "If you can be a writer there are various things you can be," she remarks, gesturing with an unlighted cigarette. "I'm a novelist. Other writers are journalists or essayists or poets. The tragedy of some people who write novels is that perhaps they should be some other type of writer."

Women, she feels, often have a native bent for adventure. "After all, Sheherazade was the first suspense-story teller, and Percy Shelley's wife wrote Frankenstein."

She sees a big difference between detective and espionage stories, each with a different point of view and each using different methods, and thinks that the author of one wouldn't necessarily be good at the other.

For every fear . . .

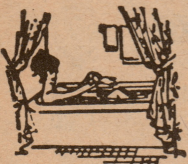

NEW YORK (AP) —Are you bored with the Hong Kong flu, the 24-hour virus, the common cold and the people who brag about having been felled by these tiresome winter ailments?

Why not startle your friends and create envy in your enemies by coming down with an interesting new affliction they probably never even heard of—a disease for all seasons?

All you have to do is to explore your hidden fears. For one of the laws of medicine guarantees that for every illness there is a fear and for every fear there is an illness.

For example:

Ever race for a bus and then, when your heart begins to palpitate, pause and wonder if you're going to keel over? You've probably been reading too many articles about heart attacks. Your problem is only angina pectoris, the fear of angina pectoris.

Bathing

Good grooming begins with a refreshing soft water bath or shower. Skin is thoroughly cleansed, free of invisible soap and perspiration film.

Call

and say

"Hey

Culligan

Man"

We'll Come Right Out!

Now and then do you get mad at your boss because he loads so many duties on you that you think he's trying to work you to death. Calm down. All you've got is a touch of kopophobia, the fear of exhaustion.

Even more common among office and factory employees is the feeling that they are stuck in a rut, doing over and over again a job that will lead them nowhere. Only one diagnosis is possible here: Tapophobia, the fear of being buried alive. Many married people today, both husbands and wives, complain of the same symptoms.

Many teen-agers nowadays subsist almost entirely on soft drinks, peanuts, cheese snacks and potato chips. What these kids don't know is that they are cowards. They are quaking inwardly in the throes of cibophobia, which means they are terrified by food.

The main thing to remember is that for every fear there is a disease. Perhaps the best of them is autophobia, the fear of one's self, a healthy fear for anyone at all times.

Golden hits of '68 number 120

NEW YORK (AP) — A total of 120 recordings—75 long-playing albums and 45 singles—were certified for gold awards in 1968, according to the Record Industry Association of America.

This is the greatest number of awards certified in one year since the association started its gold record authentication program in 1958. Sixty-one albums and 34 singles were certified in 1967.

Album awards went to: "Jim Nabors Sings," "Bob Dylan's Greatest Hits" and "John Wesley Harding," Bob Dylan; "Strange Days" and "Waiting for the Sun," the Doors; "Dream with Dean," "Welcome to My World," "Houston," "Somewhere There's a Someone" and "Dean Martin's Christmas Album," Dean Martin;

"Guantanamera," the Sandpipers; "Farewell to the First Golden Era," the Mamas and Papas; "How Great Thou Art" and "Loving You," Elvis Presley; "Distant Drums," Jim Reeves; "Blooming Hits," Paul Mauriat and Orchestra; "Best of Buck Owens," "Doctor Dolittle," "Funny Girl," "Camelot," "Gigi," "The Good, the Bad and the Ugly," "Walt Disney Presents the Jungle Book," "The Graduate," soundtracks.

Hollywood still is image-minded

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Don't talk to Beah Richards about the therapeutic benefits to careers honored by the Motion Picture Academy.

Last year Miss Richards received an Oscar nomination for her sensitive portrayal of Sidney Poitier's mother in "Guess Who's Coming to Dinner." With film and television producers more aware of the need to portray the Negro in today's America, you might think that the actress would have reaped a number of roles.

"Not so," she says with a wry smile. "My first job in the industry since 'Guess Who's Coming to Dinner' was a role last week in the television series 'Hawaii Five-O.' And that was a one-day job!"

Miss Richards made the observation with no apparent bitterness. Her life has necessarily been a series of adjustments; the lack of response to her portrayal in a highly successful film is just one of them.

How does she explain it?

"I don't really know what the reason is, except that Hollywood has always been image-minded. Whatever the initial image, it becomes permanent."

Her image, she believes, was established as matriarchal, even though she was married in the film to a strong-minded husband—"A postman; that's almost middle-class!" The black community, she contends, rebels against being classed as a matriarchal society. Hence she is caught in a dilemma.

Beah Richards is not the kind to sit around and fret about lack of acting jobs. Born and reared in Mississippi, she has learned some lessons in survival. Her early life in the South inclined her toward acting. She explained:

"Actually I had to lead two lives: I could be myself among black people, but I would have to present a different personality to the rest of the community. It was this duality that made acting come easy to me. Also, my father was a preacher, and therefore dealt a great deal in verbal imagery. I learned the usefulness of words in communicating feeling."

She moved on to Broadway and Hollywood, appearing in the stage and film versions of "The Miracle Worker," in "Hurry, Sundown" on the screen and "The Little Foxes" at Lincoln Center in New York. But after there were stretches of inactivity in between. For five years she taught classes at a charm school in New York. Lately she has used her time to write a play and a book of poems.

Rerun 2nd line 3rd graf: smile. "My first job in the industry since 'Guess Who's Coming to Dinner' was a role last week in the television series 'Hawaii Five-O.' And that was a one-day job!"

"Surely we can think of SOMETHING to celebrate."

Phil Silvers meets his match in Robert Goulet as the two practice a sketch for this week's "Kraft Music Hall" variety hour to be aired Wednesday at 9 p.m. on channel 4.

Who's the man behind the man Who hosts the Academy Awards?

By MARY CAMPBELL
AP Newsfeature Writer

On the soundtrack recording of the movie "Oliver!" on Colgems, the musical supervision, arrangements and conducting are by Johnny Green. Music and lyrics are by Lionel Bart.

"A few people who are kind enough to be interested think I have spent far too much of my life working on other people's music," the 60-year-old Green says.

"But I've lived through a strange period in music. I started out as a song writer in what was generally referred to as the golden age of the American pop song and I was lucky enough to write a few of the kind of important songs of that time." (Among them, "Coquette," "I'm Yours," "Out of Nowhere," "I Cover the Waterfront," "I Want To Be Loved," "Body and Soul")

"And I'm one of the people who became discouraged under the onslaught of country-western, rock 'n' roll, rhythm 'n' blues. Nobody was writing conventional, literate, classy songs—I don't know which is the right adjective. It was hard to bring those songs to the light of day. You had so few artists like Vic Damone, Frank Sinatra. The light music scene was being totally devoured by other phenomena.

"So, when I ain't hot on the composing scene, I'm in there with the scoring paper and stick. Among my accomplishments, let's not say talents, is conducting. Also arranging and orchestrating.

"I've been a movie buff since I was a tot, so I gravitated toward movies. I was fascinated by the technical side of movie making.

ing and took the trouble to learn about it.

"Probably the nadir of my aesthetic life was 1949 to '58 when I had two titles—general music director of the studio and executive in charge of music at Metro. It was a gargantuan struggle. The executive job alone more than took full time. I was the one who made the assignments and it took guts to assign myself to a picture. I usually did pictures other people didn't want to do that the company needed to have done.

"In the years after leaving Metro I spent 90 per cent of my time conducting west of the Mississippi, plus New Orleans and Florida. I'm the only conductor who can say he's conducted the Los Angeles Philharmonic for 18 consecutive seasons at the Hollywood Bowl. I never recorded a groove with them, but I'd like to.

"I only stopped with them to do 'Oliver' and I'm hoping they'll take me back. I had it in my 'Oliver!' contract that I could do some conducting while the picture was being made, but the work devoured me for all but 17 days of a year and seven months."

Green's next project is as

Police said they took it with them, including about $60 in cash and several credit cards.

associate producer of the movie "They Shoot Horses Don't They?"

With all his accomplishments—let's call them talents—in what category do most people place Johnny Green?

He says, "It's a little frustrating but it shows the power of TV. I'm best known today as the man who conducts the Academy Awards every year. That's not true, though I've done most of them since they've been televised.

"The first couple on TV were characterized by dull, flashy fanfares and a scrambling for music. With my impertinent mind, I own soft manila folders, thought there has to be a better way to do this. Now, the five pieces of music for each category are in their own soft manila folder, everything appropriately stamped in large type at the top. When a category is announced, the men spread out the five pieces of music on their big theater music racks. When the first syllable of the winner is announced, they open the proper one and don't care if the rest go on the floor. My assistant opens mine and we're ready. It's a perfectly orderly, quiet procedure although the audience in the front row expects to see a dramatic scrambling of music and frantic signals."
